2 Quality Assurance

To ensure that our product is of high quality, Requirements were analysed carefully, Meetings were done to solve conflicts and revise all the requirements including all functional and non functional requirements.

Use case diagrams have been generated for each functional requirement also they got evaluated and tested multiple times after implementation using our GUI mentioned above.

We made sure that our software follows high quality software standards by developing a software quality assurance plan.

The main concerns were to properly manage a plan of quality assurance which made it easier to ensure that the functional requirements are cohesive, unambiguous, and independent etc.

After passing through the SQAP step by step for each functional requirement; unit-tests and test cases had been done.

3 Change Management

3.1 Purpose of The Change Management Plan

The Change Management Plan documents and tracks the necessary information required to effectively manage project change from project inception to delivery.

The Change Management Plan is created during the Analysis Phase of the project. Its intended audience is the project manager, project team, project sponsor and any senior leaders whose support is needed to carry out the plan.

The project's analysis phase is when the change management plan is developed. The project manager, project team, project sponsor, and any senior executives whose backing is required to carry out the plan are the intended audiences. In this section, we will discuss the change management of the Sturd E-Academy platform. This section will look at Sturd E-Academy for change requests and adaptability. ### 3.3 Change readiness of your work

We employed several requirement evaluations tools to assess the changes.

To prevent jargon conflicts and further conflicts in the system, we used inconsistency management to find conflicts between objects both before and after a modification was performed. Additionally, we evaluated and identified risks associated to processes and products using risk analysis. By using temporary emails and credentials, for instance, we discovered the risk of the current authentication process and its lack of security. we assessed the countermeasures to improve security and decrease the number of fake users, that may sabotage other systems like the rating system and the review system, etc.

We also used traceability management approaches to determine the effects of the suggested modifications and to implement them by upholding consistency between the items in a requirements document. Making a traceability graph makes it simpler to determine the things impacted by a change request so that the impacts and viability may be assessed. For instance, we confirmed that the modification we did changing the provider of the video player would not affect the availability of old videos used on the old platform. Moreover, to evaluate improvements, feature diagrams allowed for the graphical display of similarities and differences within the system family.

We used requirements evaluation to rapidly and efficiently identify issues and hunt for solutions, which was essential in implementing new system improvements.
